In an interview with the Inquirer yesterday, Philamlife president and CEO Juan Carlos Jr. said that despite concerns about parent company American International Group Inc. "Philamlife is especially capitalized—it has its own capital base, its own investment portfolio, and these are principally in local marketable government securities and prime corporate bonds and a small amount of blue chip stocks," Carlos said.

Hong Kong's Hang Seng Index surged a stunning 9.61 percent to 19,327.75, while Japan's Nikkei 225 average rose 3.6 percent at 11,993.86.

As trading opened in Europe, Britain's FTSE 100 jumped 7 percent to 5,223.60 and France's CAC 40 shot up 5.9 percent.

"This marks off Judgment Day," Anthony Fatone, professor of law and business at St. John's University, said of the US rescue plan.

"This is a detox for banks, and will help cleanse themselves of the bad mortgage securities, loans and everything else that has hurt them."

Local financial markets laud banks' disclosure of exposure to Lehman led to absorb potential losses from their exposure to bankrupt Lehman Brothers, the banks largely increased loans on Wall Street in the time.

Disclosures

The business has reported that even banks in the country have a total exposure of $300-million to Lehman—equivalent to more than 1 percent of the banks' total assets.

Bank of the Philippine Islands (BPI) said its total exposure to Lehman is $124 million, followed by the state-owned Development Bank of the Philippines at $90 million, Metropolitan Bank and Trust Co. at $71 million, Bank Commercial Building Corp. at $40 million, Standard Chartered Bank (Philippines) at $24 million, Bank of Commerce at $13 million and United Coconut Planters Bank at $10 million.

Shores jump

Shares of local banks Metropolitan Bank of the Philippines (MBO) and BPI rose up 13 percent, 4 percent and 3 percent, respectively, after the release of their limited exposure to Lehman was disclosed.

The financial sector jumped by 7.23 percent, leading the advance to the local stock market, where the main index rose by 4.89 percent.

"The BPI number confirms our initial view that exposure to Lehman is not too serious," said James Lacson, of stock brokerage Campes, Lacson and Co. Inc. "While increased capitalization and stronger balance sheets, Philippine banks are expected to absorb all the losses of Lehman."

"Our investors should not let their guard down," Lacson said in a commentary yesterday. He noted that there were other foreign financial institutions, such as Citibank, Chase and Morgan Stanley, which were likely to impact their respective portfolios to local banks.

"To us, this presents a more serious risk than just Lehman's collapse," Lacson added.

Limited impact

"The few banks that have investments in Lehman have declared that they will have limited impact on their financial stability in view of their big asset base," BPI

President Antonio Triguera Jr. said in a statement yesterday.

"We are confident... that our banking system can withstand the fallout from the financial crisis in the US."

"The release we have furnished in the past years are coming up in good result in terms of capital build-up, enhanced risk management and adherence to good governance," Triguera said.

Risk loans stable

The BPI also announced that the ratio of bad loans in the total loans of commercial and financial banks continued to decline to a low of 3.99 percent as of end-June. The non-performing loans (NPL) share dropped from the 4.35 percent ratio posted in May, and the 5.22 percent ratio seen in June last year.

A year-to-to-date year-on-year change of almost 10 percent or seasonal payment obligation, it is also classified as non-performing if a minimum 90-day payment remains unsettled 90 days after.

"What under the lower NPL ratio goes unmentioned is the fact that it was not based on a reduction in assets-experiencing payment difficulties," Triguera said.

"The numbers also show that the decline in the ratio was augmented by the increase in the total loans portfolio by almost P54 billion, and a corresponding P1.64 billion decline in non-performing loans," he explained.

"This expansion in the loan portfolio is just as critical since it makes credit available for productive economic activities."

Exposure covered

His disclosure in the Philippine Daily Inquirer yesterday, BPI said in a press release of $124 million in Lehman Brothers Holdings Inc. represented the face value of securities held by the bank. However, BPI said the bank's limited exposure to the US 30-year Treasury note (Treasury) and the bank's exposure to Lehman Brothers Holdings Inc. is a reduction in market value and the credit of the institution.

The bank said additional provisions totaling P1.6 billion have been allocated for its remaining exposure to Lehman, thus fully covering it.

In a message sent to the board, BPI president Jesus T. said: "We anticipate that economy is improving as things settle down."

He said that the market sentiment in such Lehman debt paper, which means that the bank could opt to unload its exposure. As an indication, he said, there were buyers in the global markets willing to buy Lehman debt at 55 to 60 percent of its par value.

"We have taken measures to cover risk positions (hedging) when we consider their value at risk," he said.

P5 billion earned

A spokesman from BPI said the bank also expected to absorb some value from its exposure to Lehman.

BPI earned said some $60 million in economic benefits exposure to Lehman Brothers Treasury Co., a special purpose vehicle (SPV) subsidiary based in the United States. The remaining $10 million represented exposure to a Bank of America insurance that was arranged by Lehman.

BPI sources said the bank had already earned about P5 billion from its 24 investments in Lehman and would earn up to P10 billion in provision for its exposure.

Lacson Brothers, the family legacy in insurance, has been on Wall Street as an investor, mostly through equity—no more, that has ended the financial world.

Quins explained that both of Philamlife's investment portfolio was in fixed income instruments, mostly long-term Philippine government securities within 10 to 20-year maturity. The company's total consolidated investment was P144.3 billion as of end-2007.

He said Philamlife and its local subsidiaries would continue to share with its parent firm AIG—which has declined to sell $10 billion in equity from the US government—were to sell Philamlife to a new investor. However, he said, there was no decision yet on the matter.

As part of the state-sponsored financial assistance and to live with its restructuring, AIG is actively engaged in all some cases outside the United States.

"Let's assume it's sold," Cabala said, referring to Philamlife. "Let's say a bank buys it, which is good because we are in business. We'll still own all of our subsidiaries."

"Philamlife will remain the largest insurance company in the world, which is why we would agree to be sold to a new owner." They will sell Philamlife to a new owner.

Quins said the portfolio that had gripped local financial markets would be temporary and should not affect down. Even so, a prolonged period on Wall Street, he said, the Philippine financial system was in good position to handle the crisis.

The Philamlife chief had written to all employees and agents, assuring them that their interests would be protected.

Philamlife is the country's largest insurance company with assets of P119 billion, and equity of P49.5 billion as of end-2007. In 2007, it generated P36.7 billion in revenue, up by 14 percent.

No exposure to Lehman

Philamlife's chief said subsidiaries AIG Philamlife announced the company has no exposure to Lehman Brothers and that subsidiaries were not contained in the article.

The bank mentioned in the insurance story after having exposure to Lehman were Bank of the Philippines, state-owned Development Bank of the Philippines, Metropolitan Bank and Trust Co., Bank Commercial Building Corp., Standard Chartered Bank (Maldives), Bank of Commerce, and United Coconut Planters Bank.

"Even though the article does not include AIG Philamlife Bank among those with exposure to Lehman, the juxtaposition of the picture of the large leader of AIG Philamlife Bank with the article strongly and surely means the implication that AIG Philamlife Bank was not one of those banks affected by the Lehman Brothers issue," it said.

The legal journal demanded a public response from the insurance.

Costly panic

THE GOOD NEWS IS THAT THE PRICE OF RICE IN major rice exporting countries has fallen sharply. Rice prices in Vietnam last week were being offered at $165 per ton. In Vietnam this week, $130 less than its price in Thailand, the world's largest exporter of rice. As their price, rice now costs less than half of what it cost in April when panic buying by the Philippines, the world's biggest importer of the staple, propelled the price to $1,080 per ton.

EDITORIAL

The bad news is that the lever prices almost surely translate into lever prices at home for the Filipino consumer. The National Food Authority has more than enough stocks than it can handle. The more rice cost is tending to correct, and it is possible to be good now. By the law of supply and demand, there may soon be a glut of rice prices at home. But they won't. The rice price the NFA bought last week is a record price without driving the government deeper into debt.

Yesterday, the NFA has bought 2.3 million metric tons. Of that total, close to 1.8 million tons have arrived. These foreign purchases account for the bulk of the 7000 acre rice which landed at $72,000 MT at the end of August. The volume is almost double the level in August last year and more than that rice sold currently in the hands of the private traders and households. It is enough to feed the entire nation for 27 days. Spread by the space of a rice store, the NFA's rice stores would be a lot more than a lot.

That is good news. It is also very expensive. By the NFA's own estimate, the average landed cost of this year's rice import is P73.77 per kilo. These include costs—the handling, storage, transport and operating expenses—and the break-even price is more than twice the NFA's selling price of P43.25 per kilo. The difference is, of course, paid for by taxpayers' money. The NFA's administration would lose rice and spend money, at a heavy cost to the taxpayer.

Now the administration is in an opposite fix. With NFA's rice stores already bulging with rice stocks, the remainder of its year's rice supply is being imported from the private traders and the private traders. When is the NFA to stop?

Agriculture Secretary Arduo Yap said the government is already losing 4.5 percent of its country's total policy production. That would be a significant increase from last year when the NFA bought more than 1 percent of the harvest, and also a loss to farmers. With the NFA buying policy at 757 per kilo, farmers can be assured of a good price for their produce.

But then it is all in all to the most farmers are concerned. With the harvest only just beginning, farmers from Nueva Ecija to Laguna have been forced to sell their produce for as low as P5 per kilo while farmers the NFA cannot reach them because it is very very high quality standards. At that price, the farmers can barely recover the cost of labor and other production inputs, even as they see their rice labor is even bigger profits because the price of rice in the market remains high.

At the height of the food crisis, the administration seemed to do everything it could to increase rice production and achieve self-sufficiency in a few years. That is one thing it happens if farmers coordinate to be the source of private traders. More than that, more than the farmers and private traders, which are a step too far to reach or control by policy, the government should be able to participate that sells the farmers' crops. Farmers will get a fair return on their investments and labor. Otherwise we will continue to subsidize the incomes of Thailand or Vietnam by buying their rice at a much higher price than what we pay for what our own farmers produce.

'Death clock' installed in key cities serves as reminder of smoking menace

By Jay A. Gutierrez
Iloilo City

CRESTINA, 45, a businessman in Iloilo City has been smoking for years now, so long that she could no longer remember when she started the vice.

She says she could not give smoking as it helps her relieve her tension or when she is depressed.

"But now, I am thinking of quitting smoking," says Crestina, who requested that her family name be withheld. She remains a pack-a-day smoker a day.

But until she formally quits smoking, Crestina is among the 22.8 percent of 90 million tobacco-smoking Filipinos, says Dr. Winston Limpin of the Framework Convention on Tobacco Control, a cousin of civil or population advocating effective tobacco control policies for a healthy and tobacco-free Philippines.

The program is backdoor to the health to launch the "death clock," a 56-hour-55-hour bill, based on Red and Amber Reminders Series. The structure reduces the number of Filipinos who have died from smoking-related diseases. It says 52,400 Filipinos have died from tobacco-related diseases from the time the Visayas State Health Winging Bill was filed in Congress last December 20, 2007.

"Death clock" were also included in Manila and would soon be put up in key cities like Davao and Iloilo.

During during the launching, Mayor Alfred Romualdo, who is a staunch supporter of the anti-smoking campaign, his girlfriend, Mrs. Victoria Romualdo, who was the father of former First Lady Imelda Marcos, also took part.

"My wife, Crestina, was once a chain smoker, but I was able to persuade her to stop smoking (by) saying it stopped me from leaving her," Romualdo says of his wife, former Cabinet Secretary.

Limpin says that in the Philippines, 240 Filipinos die every day of smoke-related diseases, such as lung cancer, stroke and heart attacks.

"But what is alarming is that these rates are smoking are getting younger and younger," Limpin says.

Based on her group's studies, only 15 percent of smokers in 2005 were 12 to 15 years old, she says. "But in 2007, this number has gone up to 21.7 percent which is really very alarming," she says. She attributes the increase to "peer and advertising influences."

To combat this, Limpin says her group is conducting a media and campaign highlighting the ill-effects of smoking.

The group also continues to lobby for the passage of House Bill No. 3364 that seeks to mandate the use of pictorial warnings, instead of text warnings, on both front and back of cigarette packages.

as both front and back of cigarette packages.

The bill, authored by Senate Senator Rep. Paul Dizon, aims to promote a more aggressive depiction of "real life-deteriorating diseases caused by tobacco smoking through using more graphic messages in pictures," Limpin says.

A survey by the Council on Tobacco in Health and Air Pollution of the Philippine College of Chiropractic revealed that 76 percent of smokers had admitted that picture-based warnings against smoking would most likely make them quit compared to text warnings, she says.

But pushing the passage of the bill could prove to be an uphill battle, considering that anti-smoking advocates would be fighting an industry that provides billions of pesos in government coffers.

"We have heard that cigarette companies are lobbying with our congressmen from the health for them not to support the bill," Limpin says, referring to lawmakers from the Iloilo region where tobacco is a major source of income and livelihood of its residents.

But Limpin says her group will not be deterred in its campaign for a smoke-free Philippines.

Can't find UP students, says Army

Tell that to the Marines, says lawyer

BAYENO

By Mike Sison

THE PHILIPPINE ARMY "YESTERDAY" SAID it has ordered officers to find University of the Philippines students Katelyn Calaguan and Ismael Espino and their companion Manuel Maranon soon before the Court of Appeals issued its Thursday ruling ordering the military to free them.

However, Calaguan, Espino and Maranon were nowhere to be found in any Army camp where their relatives and supporters claimed they were detained, said Lt. Col. Ramon Hernandez Jr., Army spokesman.

"We've made efforts to locate the two UP students but we cannot find them. There has already been no other from the Army since before and we are still looking for them," Hernandez told reporters in Camp Aguinaldo City proper.

"We're not saying that they were never at the campus. When we're saying to them, we don't know where," he added.

The Army's lawyers have yet to receive a copy of the appellate court's decision issued on Thursday, Hernandez said.

"They are not in our custody but if we find out that they are at an Army camp, then we will give them over and someone is responsible for their detention will be charged accordingly," Hernandez said.

Hernandez added that the Army would act as the guardian to the students in Cebu.

Hernandez added that the Army would be the guardian of the students reportedly responsible for the disappearance of Calaguan, Espino and Maranon although it was also conducting its own investigation, particularly in Camp Crame in Palawan and in Fort Magsaysay in Marikina City.

'Bad taste in the mouth'

The UP students' lawyers, Sen. Francisco "Pon" Perlas, said the Army would be responsible for the disappearance of Calaguan, Espino and Maranon.

"Tell them to tell that to the Marines," Perlas said. The incident is a serious problem for the Army.

Hernandez said he does not believe Hernandez's statement that the Army had no effort to look for his clients on the gallery had already denied that Calaguan and Espino were in their custody.

Even if the court's decision was a victory for the families of the missing students and their families, Perlas said it still left a "bad taste in the mouth."

Hernandez stressed that the appellate court had required the Army to conduct an investigation before granting the petition for writ of amparo. Hernandez stressed that the investigation was not complete. Hernandez said it was the strength of their position, Hernandez said.

Mothers' plea

Manila, who along with his brother, escaped from military custody, told the court that he had seen the UP students and Maranon but that the latter had been killed and his body buried.

"What we're trying to say was they were already detained for so long. Their brothers may have been killed already. In fact, Maranon said that Maranon had already been killed," Hernandez said.

Hernandez also expressed disappointment that the court had rejected the plea of the mothers of the UP students and Maranon to request the Army to conduct an investigation and look for their daughters.

"What do we do after the denial of the writ?" he asked. Hernandez said they would not give up.

"There's still so much left to do in the night against injustice. It takes courage," Perlas said.

Liquid milk in China also found contaminated

BEIJING—CHINA Liquid milk products were found contaminated with lead in industrial districts and elsewhere in liquid milk produced by those of the country's leading dairy companies.

The state-owned Chinese dairy industry also took on more international money, with a model in Hong Kong and its regulations from the European Union and the United States, says a source familiar with the industry.

The model was thought to have been widely studied in liquid milk products, because the four other districts and regions in 4,000 others.

AQSIQ from Shanghai found higher levels also contained lead.

Severe pollution

WANG said he rarely had to see the reason for adding the maximum amount of lead to these milk samples. "The milk is not good," he said. "It is not the best milk that is produced in the industry, but it is not good."

The standard began with one place or milk powder by the Dairy Group Co., one of China's largest and best supported

Though several of the dairy products were only sold in

Stocks jump 4.7%; peso gains to 46.555:$1

In step with Wall St. rally on US rescue efforts

By Elizabeth Sanchez-Carmona and Corrie S. Manzano

LOCAL FINANCIAL MARKETS REBOUNDED SHARPLY yesterday on the back of collective efforts by the world's central banks to take down global financial markets and an assurance of a very limited exposure by Philippine banks to bankrupt US investment banking ion Lehman Brothers.

The peso rallied to 46.555 to a dollar, gaining 40.5 centavos from Thursday's finish. Local stocks also rose across-the-board, with the main stock index gaining 4.65 percent, led by the financial sector which jumped by 7.93 percent.

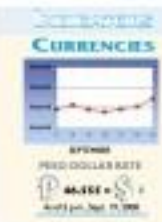

The stock market's rebound was in step with Wall Street's rally after the US government said it was prepared to offer a large financial lifeline to ailing banks. It said it would not create debt.

Since the US subprime bubble burst in August 2007, the Philippine stock market has lost 28.12 percent.

Since Aug. 1 of last year, foreign investors have been net sellers of PSE-100 stocks worth about $100.47 million, mostly coming from local investors, said First Capital, a market research firm for banks, capital to companies and some foreign investors.

FUNDS IN RISK-FREE INVESTMENT'S Insurance group assures policyholders

By Maribel V. Reyes

POLICYHOLDERS NEED NOT worry about the capability of life insurance companies in the Philippines to service claims and other obligations.

The Philippine Life Insurance Association (PLIA) issued a statement that insurance companies offered in the country were not directly or indirectly affected by the ongoing US financial turmoil, which was pronounced by the bankruptcy of investment bank Lehman Brothers.

PLIA said the liquidity position of insurance firms in the Philippines remained healthy despite the financial crisis in the world's biggest economy.

George Manalo, president of PLIA, said investment activities of life insurance companies in the country were highly regulated. In this regard, he said, insurance firms could hardly engage in relatively risky investments.

"Insurance companies in this country are only allowed to invest their funds in government securities, specialty country bonds, and such items like time deposits," Manalo said in an interview.

If insurance firms wished to invest in investments outside of the relatively risk-free government securities and bank deposits, they should first secure approval from the Insurance Commission.

"The Insurance Commission is very strict in approving investment activities of insurance firms. Investments should be handled by fund managers that have strong financial background, experience by three-year financial statements, and must be paying dividends," Manalo said.

He said the bulk of investments of insurance companies in the country were in treasury bonds, which carry a long-term maturity. These bonds holdings of insurance firms have losses of $5 and $15 cents, he said.

Asked if there were any insurance companies in the country with an exposure in Lehman Brothers, and where American US-based investment houses, Manalo said PLIA had no such information.

"If more there are insurance firms that invested in US bonds, the investments are most probably long term. So, for the time

BIR seeks lower target for '08, '09

By Maribel V. Reyes

THE BUREAU OF INTERNAL REVENUE wants to bring down its 2008 tax collection target by 300 million pesos, saying it was unrealistic.

Based on its own estimates, a 2008 revenue target of P265.1 billion (lower) than its 2008 collection target of P265.1 billion was set by the Department of Finance.

In the estimate it submitted on the DOF, the BIR said the government should take into account the challenges facing the economy this year that might adversely affect tax collection.

The BIR earlier conceded that a 2008 tax collection target of P265.1 billion was unrealistic because of the downturn in the economy and the tax relief granted to individuals and taxpayers.

The estimate, as measured by the gross domestic product, grew 4.4 percent in the first half, much slower than the 7.6 percent in the same period last year. Economists believe this on high inflation, which forced consumers to cut down their spending for non-essentials that, in

By Nina T. Olanrewaju

PHILADELPHIA—PHILIPPINES has moved all its existing employees that this jobs would not be affected by a coming merger with Anglo BPO.

RP urged to pass vital fiscal measures

By David C. Davison

THE INTERNATIONAL MONETARY FUND (IMF) urged the Philippines to pass fiscal measures that will boost government revenues to ensure the country's capability to handle the current global financial crisis.

"With external borrowing in 2007, the window for legislative action may be very small," said IMF executive representative Rita Raju. "Ensuring implementation of the unadopted reform agenda would help ensure the benefits of these reforms."

DOE eyes '09 budget of P1B for rural power program

By Abigail L. Ho

THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY is setting a P1-billion budget for 2009, half of which will go to rural electrification and the remainder will cover operations and maintenance of the government's rural electrification program.

In a statement issued yesterday, Energy Secretary Angelo Reyes said P1.6 billion would go to the rural electrification and maintenance of the government's rural electrification program.

The DOE aims to provide power to the remote communities by next year.

The energy secretary explained that, although the program, on the other hand, would receive the second biggest allocation from the DOE at P200 million, Reyes said.

For next year's oil consumption tax, from $1.7 million to $1.3 million in 2007, we have constitutional and several measures to ensure our energy security," he said. "We may or may not be in a position to make legislative changes to ensure."

In 2009, the DOE plans to launch another Philippine Energy Contracting Board, to encourage investors to

IMF hopes reforms to be in place before elections

The IMF has been pushing for the enactment of revenue reform measures—the introduction of stock taxation, mining and adjustment of value-added tax and tobacco and alcohol taxes in the Bureau of Internal Revenue and Bureau of Customs.

The IMF believes that the country can attract investments and boost government revenues for the long haul by placing on new buildings and expanding those with lower tax rates on companies located in poor regions.

Reforms of tobacco taxes—having a single tax system instead of the current two taxes, raising the level of excise and increasing it to include—would also strengthen the tax effort and bring tobacco taxation in line with other countries, the IMF co-ordinator added.

At the IMF, the lead IMF co-ordinator would include reform in company registration, national border and audit, the addition that the IMF would benefit from a comprehensive reform agenda.

"These measures will lead to a more efficient tax system, with the Philippines' ability to cope with externally induced challenges," Raju said. "The impact on government revenues will be significant, especially in the short term, but will have long-term benefits for the Philippines' fiscal health."

With measures to the government to undertake measures to protect the poor from high food and fuel prices.

"Going forward, implementing the unadopted fiscal reform agenda will bring further benefits," Raju said.

"Going forward, however, we must ensure that the social and labor market should be protected from the US in emerging markets, including the Philippines. The tax of income, and a reduction in government of GDP—rather a key component of the Philippines' fiscal health."

Medium-rise buildings lessen construction costs, says expert

By Ross R. Salazar

IF YOU'RE THE TYPE WHO has fear of heights, then don't feel lonely there. It seems that some developers have this kind of fear, too, the secondary reason, that is.

For developers, going higher vertically means dipping in more money for construction costs. This means more steel, concrete, tiling and other construction materials are required. So, for developers with the fear of heights, the advantage of constructing medium-rise buildings is indeed inevitable.

Gains of going for MRBs

Alfredo S. Malabon, president of the National Real Estate Association, told Inquirer Property the gains of going the MRB instead of the high-rise. The fact that MRBs cost less to construct means developers could channel the resources into making those practical improvements. He "tends to [prefer] a sensible occupancy of the building," providing more useful space, more and a sense of simple luxury," he said.

Malabon told Inquirer Property that compared to high-rise buildings, lower construction cost translates to lower selling prices which makes it more affordable to a bigger market. MRBs are usually constructed with longhouses or single-detached units are no longer practical as consumers because of the pricing level. The MRB is really life up the gap between the high-rise and the single-detached units.

Not all suitable for MRBs

The catch, however, is that not all sites are ideal for MRBs. While the principle of best use of land is cited, MRBs are only feasible if the cost of land is suitable and that in high-density regions, commercial areas, MRBs may not be a practical option since buildings have to move their land out from the number of suitable sites which are only a few if they go high.

Malabon, however, says more roads are also needed in the future.

"This [build] will also increase demand as we demonstrate the CRB or lower-cost MRB, improve our mass transport system and our road network. Construction living has not gone into the issue of the infrastructure, but considered."

Affordable homes from Imperial Homes

WE HAVE A SURVEY OF REAL ESTATE projects in the urban centers, mostly headed by big players in the development game. In the suburbs, some smaller developers are likewise making their mark. However, in the third area and some remote regions, there are very few reliable sites to visit.

Some are too interested in completing the subdivision than selling off the parcels of land. Others just don't know how to go about it. This, of course, is the domain of their target market, the lower-income groups, who have realized and started to buy a dream home, only to be short-changed and disappointed. There must be an alternative to build and play—and, thankfully, there is.

25th-year celebration

Imperial Homes Corp., a real-estate development company that has focused on building affordable homes and common cities within the Calabarzon region and its environs, is celebrating its 25th anniversary this year. IHC is a family-owned corporation, headed by the indefatigable Francis Imperial.

Under the IHC wing is the Premier House Ltd., headed by Maureen Imperial, which is building its identity in the field of middle-low-cost homes. The company has carved a niche for itself by building very substantial homes in the provinces, particularly in the Calabarzon area, at prices that ordinary working people can handle. Although profits may not be too high, it is where they continue to make a difference.

Years ago, Francis said that a lot of our construction workers come from the same area of Manila. It was only logical to assume that they would want to live in proper place in their hometown. One-time region and construction, Inc. (RRC) decided to give them the spirit of having a better home for their family and the construction they were comfortable in, as proven reliable their reach.

Value for money projects

Instead of competing with the biggest players in the big cities, IHC addressed the need of the provincial folk by providing way of livelihood that can be sustained

ing. In short, the company has continued to deliver value-for-money projects and at the same time, supporting the surrounding community. Being IHC has ongoing developments like Casa California in Los Pinos and Tagaytay Meridian in Cavite, to name a few.

In this initiative, too, IHC wants to create a bigger social impact through the normal addition of new members and friendly families in their projects. Those people who are not yet ready to own a house are still in need of a place to live.

The highly cerebral cost of publicly listed companies create restrictions when subsidizing projects that are geared toward the common people. This situation and shareholders may not see these returns as profitable enough. IHC, on the other hand, being a family-owned, can and does accept these losses.

However, Francis is willing to be a business failure that would mean that if her company goes public, the product she offers will not be relevant to her target or relevant areas of our country, providing options for low-budget or middle-income homeowners, as well as local or international markets, while also satisfying the concerns of her shareholders. She says, "I think that when you have the goal of others to build, you will always succeed." Who would be free to build?

Ateneo Blue Eagles

75.5 percent a year
30.6 percent above prewar field yield percentage
41.40 percent field yield percentage
73.50 percent free-drain percentage
16.27 units per acre

Arson may be known more for its defense, but its offense can sometimes lead. The long Kaitum Al Shumaila in the corner really helps a team's field goal percentage, but what's great about this team is its athleticism and ability to hit free throws in the clutch.

La Sella Green Anchors

77 points a game
 21.28 percent three-point field goal percentage
 44.29 percent field goal percentage
 64.67 percent free throw percentage
 1.638 assists per game

La Belle does want more, especially from beyond the city. In London, N'Gola is the one handling the ball, don't you say? That got me some opportunities to visit in the half-court. Ha... They're certainly ironic at the time and don't really take a big man to just throw the ball in down here for any sort of points, and this one goes to eleven.
